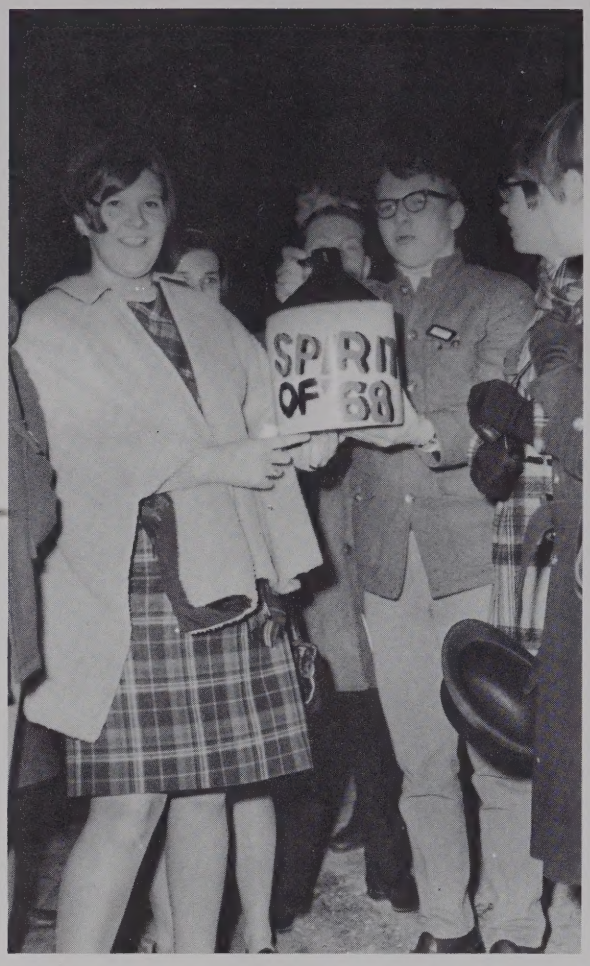
Together we work for unity



Three communities—Ashley, Auburn, and Waterloo—marked many changes in 1968. Their schools had been separate and independent, but through a consolidation all three became one, used the same building, and bore the same name. Although construction of the building itself took three years, the time when students were to utilize the same facilities came quickly. It was up to underclassmen as well as seniors to forget loyalties to former schools and to start thinking of themselves as Barons. After many convincing reminders, the task was gradually accomplished. The pride the students shared when their band received a first at contest, their football team made a winning touchdown, and a DeKalb student rated well at the science fair was helpful in building unity among the students. With all the students as well as the faculty and administration working together, the school became united in spirit as well as in facilities.

DeKalb High School students and "the spirit of '68" came to life during the week of the sectional. Seniors Pam Andres and Bill McAlpin display their "spirit" to a gathered crowd of happy Baron fans.

The necessity for more room, better facilities, and modern teaching techniques created the need for DeKalb High School. One of the important features of the school of which Barons are most proud is the neat exterior appearance.

After a morning of silence, complete with gym sneakers and sealed lips, the Baron cheerleaders broke the spell with the school song. The sectional pep session exhibited a true picture of DeKalb unity.

For Marianne Grueter, Baron spirit includes chilly nights.

Unity in the classroom

Carol Fitzgerald, Kitty Stone, Kathy Wolfe, and Rhoda Rose act out an emotional death drama as a Dramatics class project.

Self-expression is communicated thru English

The English department offered an excellent array of courses through which the art of communication could be achieved. English 9 and 10 developed speaking and writing skills, with emphasis on grammar, essay writing, and speech. English II included these areas also, along with the study of American literature. Designed for the college-bound student, English 12 refined literary and grammar skills, and included a study of English literature.

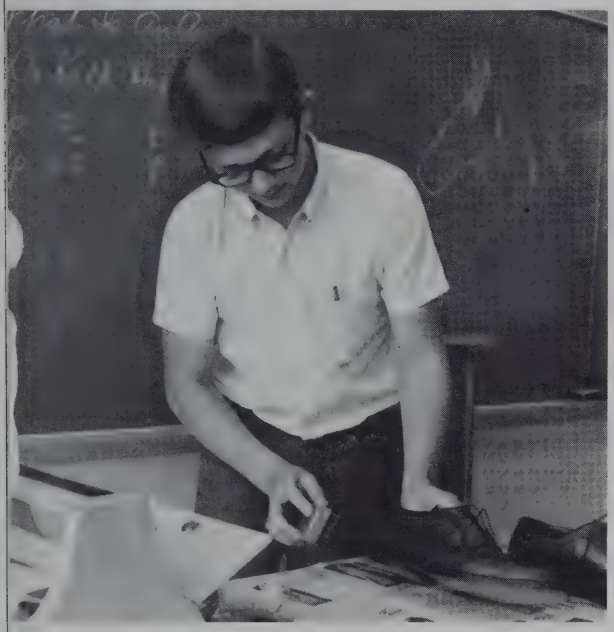
The art of communication as related to the business world was pursued in Business English. Each English class also spent a six-weeks period in the Reading Lab, to increase speed and accuracy in reading. Speech was offered for the student wishing to learn to express himself with more confidence. Acting and related talents were cultivated through Dramatics. Journalism acquainted the student with the methods of newspaper communication.

Keith Grandlienard uses the Craig Reader to increase his speed in Developmental Reading.

English students often need to refer to library resources. Keith Bunch does research on an English 10 assignment.

Have the Barons gone Hippie? Pam Andres presents her "Philosophy of Life" in song as part of a senior English panel.

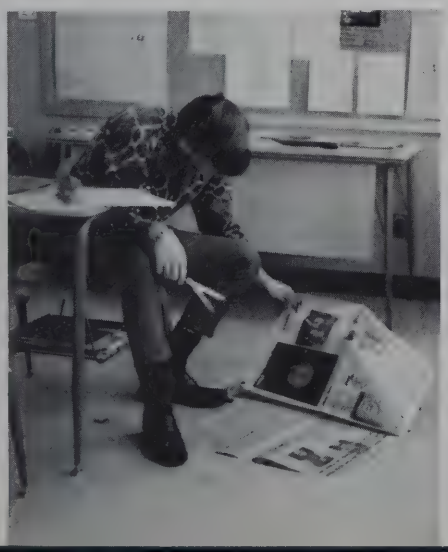
"How To Do It" speeches revive the old "show and tell" spirit of speech students. Rex Metcalf gives a free shoe-shine lesson.



"Between you, me, and the gatepost . . ." Judy Drerup gives a message to Mary Miller as gatepost Jenny Holzbauer listens to this English skit.

Composition is an important area of any English course. These juniors compose an in-class theme.

Marty Potts constructs a model newspaper for a Journalism project.



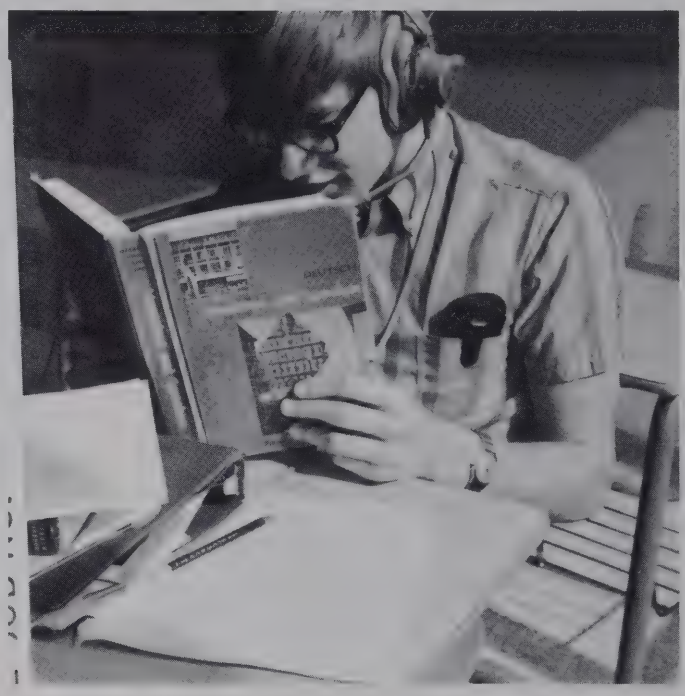
The Barons speak in many languages

The foreign language department made active use of three new sets of lab equipment. In addition to the traditional booth-type lab in the French room, the Spanish and German rooms contained the modern overhanging labs.

French, Spanish, and German were the modern languages in the curriculum, including three levels of Spanish and German, and four levels of French. Study of these languages begins with training in the reading, speaking, and writing of them in their elementary form. This training increases with each year of study, vocabulary and grammar skills being continually developed, until students can understand the native languages as they are spoken.

Latin, the background of modern languages, was offered on two levels. First year students drilled vocabulary and Latin grammar and studied mythology. Latin II classes pursued a study of Caesar's accounts of the Gallic wars.

Debbie Herberger leads a parade of Latin students wearing typical Roman garb.



Doug Oberlin attempts vocabulary drills of the "Deutsch" language in hopes of someday fluently speaking German.

A display of the colorful French culture is created by these three French students.

The finishing touch is added to a colorful display prepared by these Latin students for Dedication Week.

The overhanging language labs made learning a foreign tongue fun to German, French, and Spanish students.

Freshman Susan Zook follows in the text to the sound of the tape in Spanish language lab.

Kitty Stone reveals the true side of her personality in her intricate floral wood carving.

Senior Bob Davidson works intently on his wood sculpture as one phase of crafts class.

The fine arts stress beauty and precision

The art department took on a new look this year. In addition to the regular General Art there were several specialized courses. Commercial Art, Drawing and Painting, Photography, Ceramics, and Crafts classes all enabled students to expand skills in particular areas. Interest in the arts was cultivated through the Fine Arts Appreciation Class.

The programs of the choirs and bands viewed by the public were perfected in daily class sessions. Hours of work were devoted to these programs, as well as to the preparation of contest numbers. The training choir, composed of beginners, awaited promotion to the concert choir of next year. Freshmen, or training band members, practiced with the hope of gaining seats in the concert band.

Drawing and painting students, like Becky Berg, brightened the school with their creations.

In an outdoor session, this undiscovered Audubon is perhaps sketching a bird perched nearby.

"Okay, let's go over that line again." With contest coming up, this girls' ensemble works for a superior rating.

How do Archie comics fit in with training choir? Sheila Hall may not know, but she seems deeply involved!

The oom-pah-pahs of the basses and baritones come floating across the football field during band class.

A typical day in the trombone section has Richard Carr going through daily practice with the rest of the band.

Three training choir altos rehearse a selection to be used in the coming concert.

The duplicating station and the typing pool constantly keep the steno lab girls working hard.

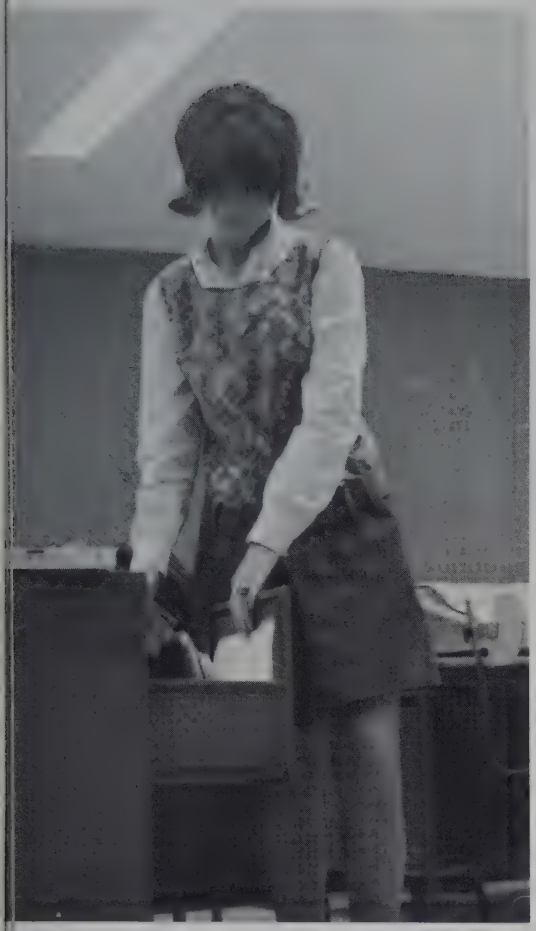
Students lay foundations for business future

New opportunity—through a wide assortment of equipment and added selection of courses—served students in the business department.

Basic understanding of principles and functions of the business world was presented in General Business. Fundamental skills of mathematics used in business were studied in Business Math. Business Law classes spurred interest in our system of laws and took field trips to court sessions. Typing students improved practical skills on manual and electric machines, also learning use of the dictaphone. The use of ledgers, balance sheets, and adding machines in Bookkeeping classes gave students practice in record-keeping. Girls in Shorthand strove to master skills of transcribing and taking dictation. Calculators, duplicators, dictaphones, and ten-keys were among machines that provided a simulation of realistic office situations in Office Practice and the new three-hour Steno Lab.

Joanne Buchs operates this machine which records bookkeeping transactions.

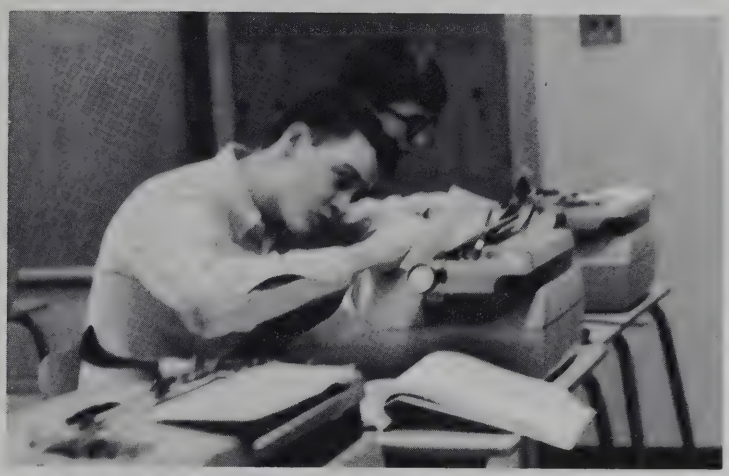
Bonnie Tuttle transcribes from the dictaphone in the Guidance Office as a part of steno lab.



Linda Gunn uses the principles of filing as she places forms in a vertical file.

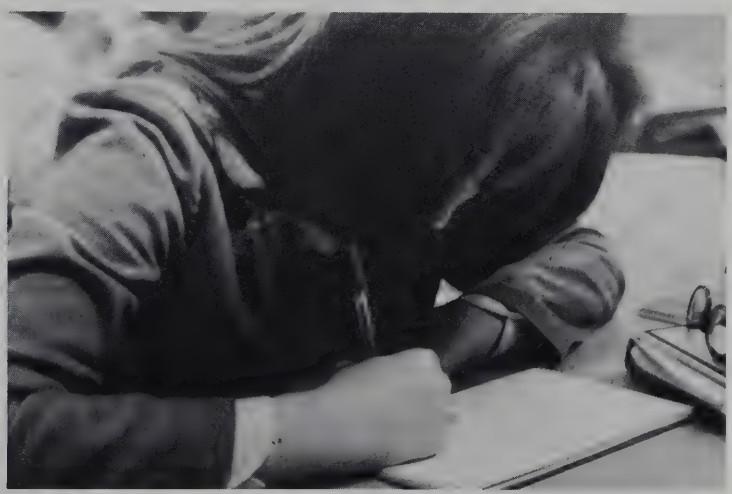
Cheryl Seifert finds working in the steno lab offers a chance to try her hand at unusual jobs—like filling the duplicator.

Bookkeeping students find adding machines helpful in checking for those careless little mistakes.



John Farrington scowls intently at that letter that got out of place and takes measures to remove it immediately.

This isn't Greek, though it looks that way. It's just an example of the language of the secretary—shorthand.



Pam Beatty is the chief suspect in an unsolved mystery. Use of the lie detector was one of the many experiments undertaken in Psychology classes.

A comparison of the past and present of American civilization is brought into focus for juniors in U. S. History.

Social studies is

A variety of new visual aids, maps, and charts, combined with the new surroundings, added interest to the social studies department. In Geography, students gained a basic understanding of locations, terrains, and the natural resources possessed by each country. This class stressed the importance of the interdependence of nations and developed the ability to read and interpret maps and globes. World History reviewed the diverse cultures from the dawn of civilization, down through the Middle Ages, to modern times. The goal of Government classes was to develop an appreciation of American democracy and knowledge of the democratic processes involved in self-government. In Economics, students were given the opportunity through stock projects and term papers to investigate problems which affect the American economy. The goal of Sociology was to prepare the student to meet the problems of society in the adult world. Through the study of human behavior in Psychology, students received guidelines for understanding their own social and personal problems. Valuable training for prospective teachers was gained in Exploratory Teaching. Students were allowed to practice teaching following periods of theory and observation.

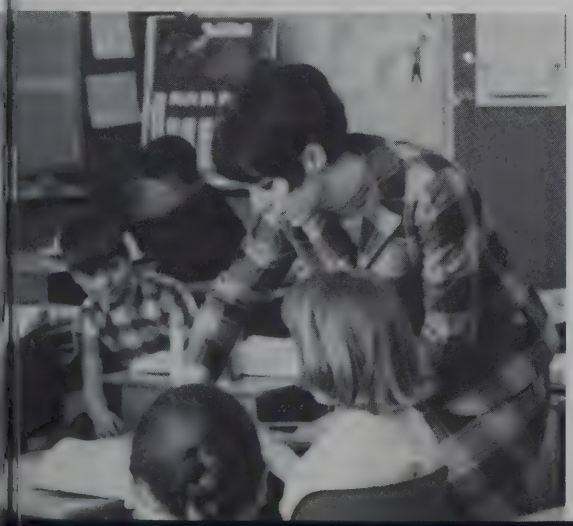
Third-graders are attentive to Kathy Foley's newly-learned teaching methods.



Economics students bought and sold stock as one of their projects. Mark Souder checks the daily stock report.

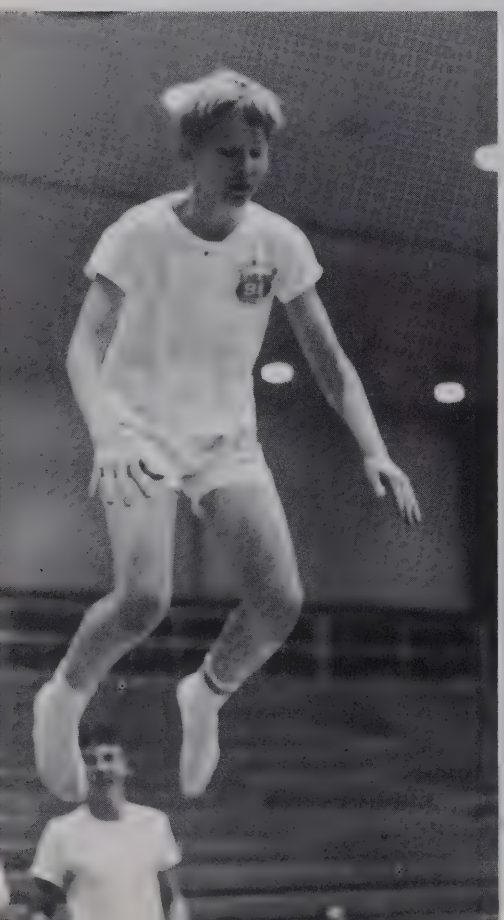
Linda Kandel and Dianna Skelly discuss ancient civilizations with the help of the globe in World History.

"Ugh—calisthentics!" Jim Mertz looks as if he would rather skip the leg lifts and get on with gym class.

Susie Drerup lets her hair down and has some fun on the parallel bars, gymnastics being one phase of Girls' Phys. Ed.

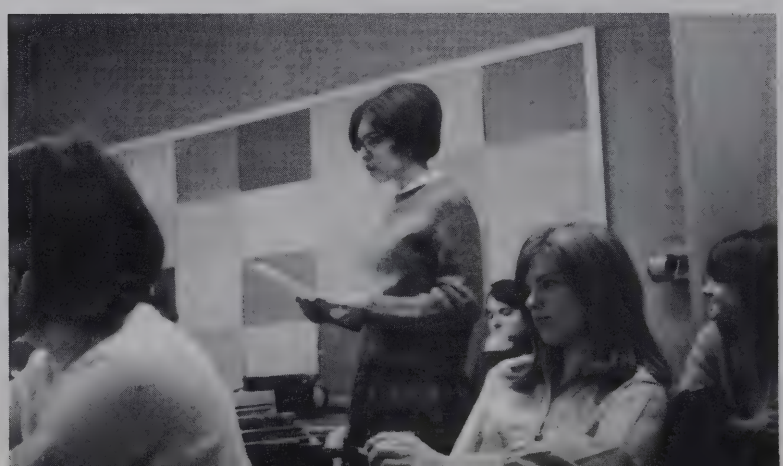
Barons strive for physical fitness

Tom Polglase shows off his trampolene skill in a precision knee drop.



The Physical Education Department presented a well-rounded fitness program. Phys. Ed. and Health were required for freshmen and sophomores. Juniors and seniors were offered Phys. Ed. on an elective basis. Gym classes enjoyed the use of the football field, track, and parking lot in warm weather for sports such as track, running, and baseball. Colder days brought the use of indoor facilities—trampolenes, gymnastic equipment, and volleyball nets for various sports. Health was designed to give a background in personal and community healthful living.

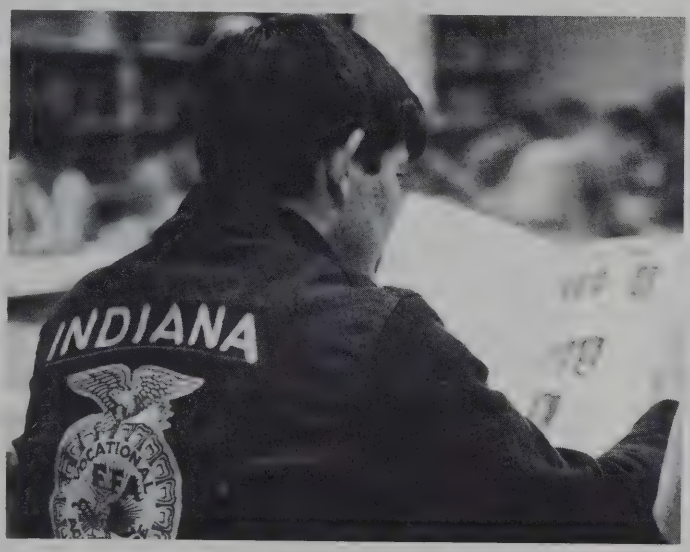
Health class is the "textbook" part of Physical Education. Cathie Johnson gives an oral report to the class.



Ag students learn production methods

The farm shop and adjoining classrooms were filled with boys studying a variety of vocational agriculture courses. Ag. I and II promoted the learning of basic production practices and the development of plans for a future in agriculture. Advanced Livestock Production, Advanced Crop Production, and Farm Management offered special training in their respective fields. The classing and testing of soils and the importance of management in conservation were studied in Soil Science. Basic Horticulture acquainted students with general botany and plant pests and control. Farm Power, Advanced Farm Shop and Farm Machinery classes taught maintenance and repair of major farm machinery.

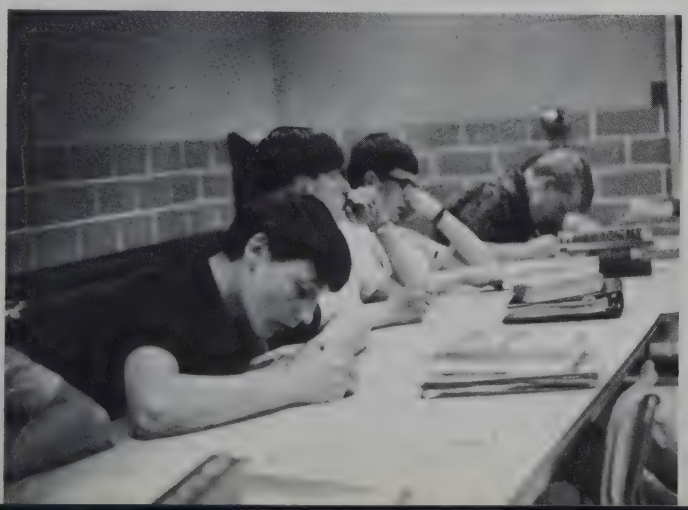
The farm shop offers practical experience to these boys in the Farm Machinery class.



This freshman studies cross-section of different varieties of corn in Agriculture I.

Senior Bob Schwartz makes an old tractor look new again with a fresh coat of paint.

The Ag. classrooms near the shop provide convenient facilities for learning the textbook slant on farm procedures.



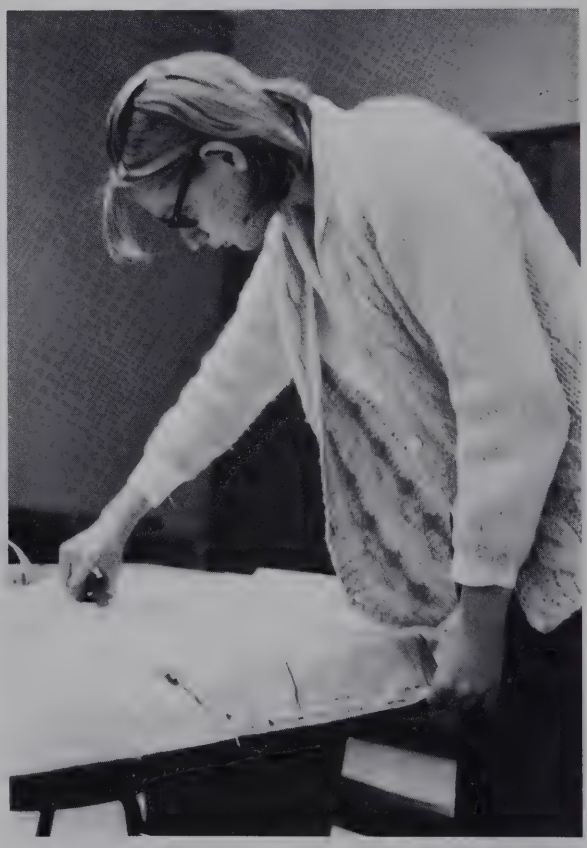
Home Ec is preparation for better home living

Each day found both modernly equipped Home Ec. labs teeming with the activity of future homemakers at work. Basic Home Ec. instilled an understanding of foods, clothing care and design, and money management. Girls in Foods classes practiced food management and meal preparation. Clothing classes developed wardrobe design and sewing skills. Areas of interior decoration, landscaping, and gardening were investigated in Housing. Family Care and Relations familiarized girls with various phases of marriage and family living. A new and quite successful course, Home Ec. for Boys, provided training in family life and the social graces.

Who says boys can't cook? Steve May and Roger Hartman get ready for the big feast.

Jan Phelps arranges a table setting to be used for the meal that her Foods class has prepared.

A basic step in clothing construction is laying and cutting out the pattern, as Caren Richardson demonstrates.



A basic one-piece cotton dress is a beginning sewing project for freshman Penny Deller.

Larry Grogg and Steve Koch are having fun while they apply their Auto Mechanics training to this sorry-looking car.

Behind the guise of a safety mask, Larry Norton operates a drill press in Woodworking class.

Industrial Arts expand vocational horizons

Brad Whittington practices the precise and intricate skills needed for drafting.

The industrial arts thrived with the new stock of tools and machinery. Students worked with metal shop tools and machines in Metals. Use and care of electrical instruments were studied in Electricity. Woodworking classes acquainted students with construction, carpentry, and reading drawings. Drafting I was an introduction to the plan and design of industrial products. Engineering Drafting and Architectural Drafting developed drafting skills in their respective fields. The three-hour vocational skills classes, Auto Mechanics, and Vocational Machine Drafting, provided actual training in employable skills. A new phase of shop—Home Arts for Girls—taught the efficient use and repair of appliances.

Pam Seiss put hours of sanding and varnishing into refinishing this chest for Home Arts.

Maybe Larry Reynolds considers Physics class one big problem. Here he works a formula on the board.

A future NASA expert attempts a rocket launching in the parking lot. This rocket is an example of the projects built by students in Aerospace Education.

Remember all those enlightening days in the biology lab? Donn Starkey, looking much like a scholarly professor, observes a specimen under the lens.

A touch of the mysterious . . . Russ Mitchener and Linda Couey anxiously await the results of this Advance Chem. experiment.

Beaker, flask, Bunsen burner . . . Marcia Overmyer and Carol Sowle put this equipment into active use in chemistry lab.

At the close of another hectic day, the lab is still and quiet.

Science promotes continuing progress

After what seemed like an endless wait to anxious science students, the four labs and lecture hall were at last completed and ready for work. The added facilities made experimenting easier and more enjoyable.

Survey Science students received a basic introduction to the principal fields of science. In Biology, students investigated problems of evolution, development, and genetics, with the use of microscopes, the aquarium, and greenhouse. Chemistry offered students a study of atomic theory, chemical reactions, and a chance to develop the scientific method of thinking. Advanced Chemistry and Biology allowed students to research areas of special interest and develop valuable lab skills. Physics presented students with an understanding of the physical world around them. Pre-flight ground training and the opportunity of actual flying experience was available to those in Aerospace Education.

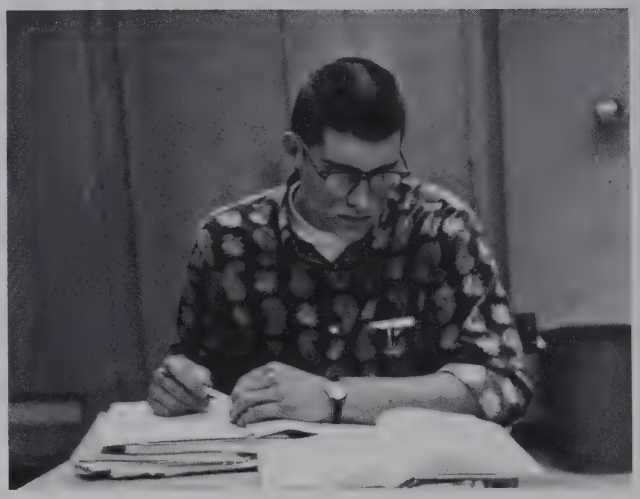
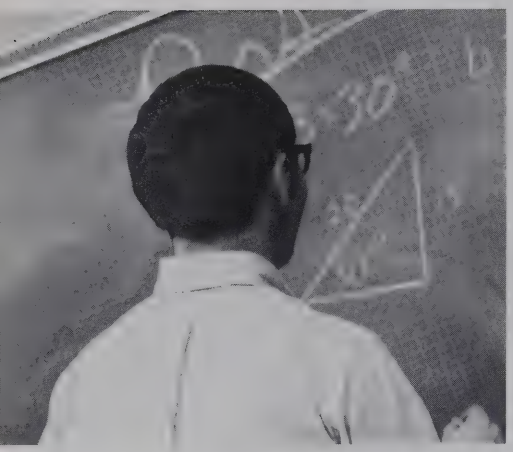
Math offers problems and equations to solve

The variety of math courses offered allowed math-minded students to investigate this area fully. In Practical Math, students increased their skills in handling real numbers, stressing math as one integral part of nearly all occupations. The purpose of Algebra I and II was to promote an understanding of the basic structure of real numbers and to acquire algebraic skills in using them. Geometry helped the student to learn organization of his ideas and sound deductive reasoning through formal proofs. Trigonometry provided for analytical development in math through the study of trigonometric functions. Analytic Geometry students strove for an understanding of relations between algebraic and geometric concepts.



After completing Trig, many seniors go on to take Analytic Geometry. Sam Stepp works "Analyt" problems.

Learning to use the slide rule is one part of Advanced Algebra, Jay Oberholtzer practices on the large model.



Russ Mitchener solves this triangle using trigonometric functions.

Steve Stafford, Roger Shumaker, and Dave Gill demonstrate interest in the scientific world in a Physics lab.

Paul DeLucenay and Lawrence Richter pursue their interest in athletics as they work out with weights.

Saber scholars . . . honoring top 5% of senior class

Therese Miller and Meg Sockrider are involved in many extra-curricular activities, including the Saber staff.

Working as a student librarian, Shirley Carnahan checks out study material to Lee Henderson.

Bill Guinther, Dave Shipe, and Jack Sheets use the library resources to further their knowledge of current events.

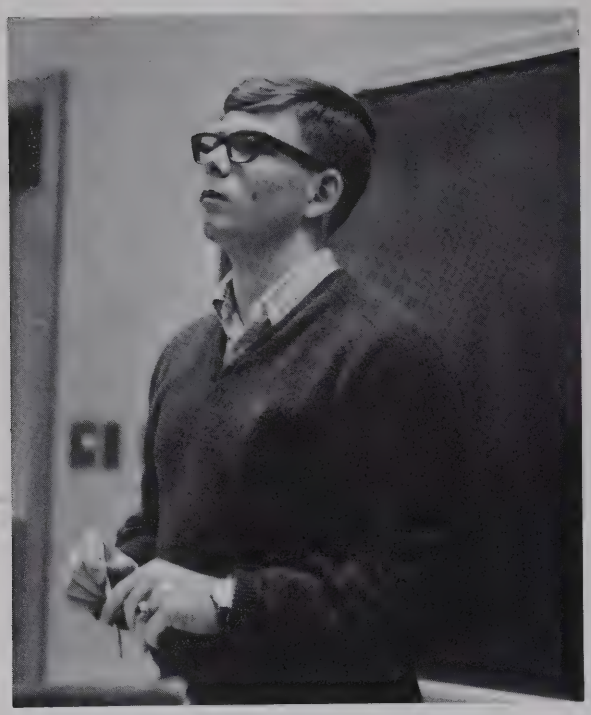
Representation stimulates intraschool harmony



President Roger Shumaker patiently listens to a suggestion from one of the Student Council members.

The Student Council represents not only the students, but their ideals. Many hours were spent debating issues which had the entire student body's best interest at heart.

The year 1968 will prove to be an extremely important one for DHS. It set the foundation for the future generations of classes. Supporting Tam Yat Ming; supplying the Commons with a coke machine; American Field Serivce; and sponsoring a spirit dance for the Regional are examples of assorted accomplishments.

These attentive girls listen closely to a motion placed before the Council at a regular meeting.

Students awarded thru National Honor Society

Lawrence Richter greets his parents with a smile of happiness after being installed as a member of the Honor Society.

Leadership, scholarship, service, and character are the qualities necessary for membership in the National Honor Society. Membership is an honor but it is also a responsibility and the beginning of an obligation to "create an enthusiasm for scholarship, to stimulate a desire to render service, to promote worthy leadership, and to encourage the development of character." Juniors and Seniors, who have maintained a scholarship level, beginning with the freshman year, of no grade below a C, are eligible for membership. These grade averages must be maintained to remain a member.

Mrs. Reed keeps student secretaries Jan Gschwend and Rita Eldridge occupied with pulling cards for missing books.

Working in Student Service, no matter in which area, is one of the most rewarding activities in which a student can participate. Each student gives his time, courtesy, honesty, and responsibility to the duty of helping others. Student Service gives the student a "sneak preview" of how our society is dependent on the services we give each other.

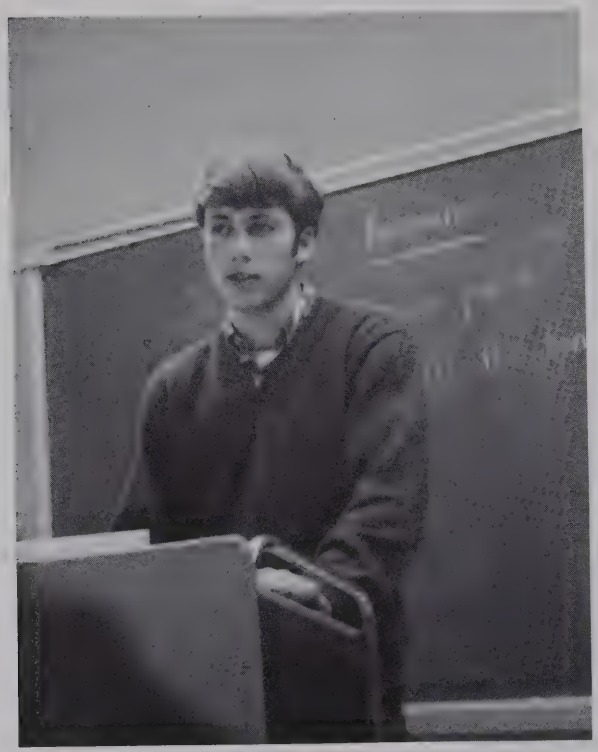
Thespian society rewards service in dramatics



Kim Charleston, president of newly formed Thespians, eagerly listens to fellow members for new ideas.

Ed Walsh and Debbie Ritenour happily play the part of high school sweethearts in the play, "Antic Spring."

The Thespian Society may be fairly small, but very rewarding. It is considered to be the "National Honor Society" of drama. Certain qualifications are required to enter. These can be obtained through participation in school plays, applying make-up, and painting sets. The motto of the Society, "Act well your part; there all the honor lies," gives recognition to the talent in the dramatics field. Self-improvement in the field of communication is the main goal of this organization.

Hard work + diligence = drama club

The curtain rises, a hush falls over the audience and one of the many great Dramatics Club productions begins. This first year the Dramatics Club provided excitement, pleasure, and lots of laughs for all those involved in productions such as "Antic Spring" and "You Can't Take It With You," which were opened to the public, and "Thanksgiving A La Carte" and "The Red Flannel Suit," which were presented to the student body. This club offered opportunities for interested students to study and practice the many phases of drama. Club members crammed lines, served as student directors, painted sets, applied make-up, sold tickets, and organized advertising for the plays presented this year. These experiences gave students a further understanding of the world of drama.

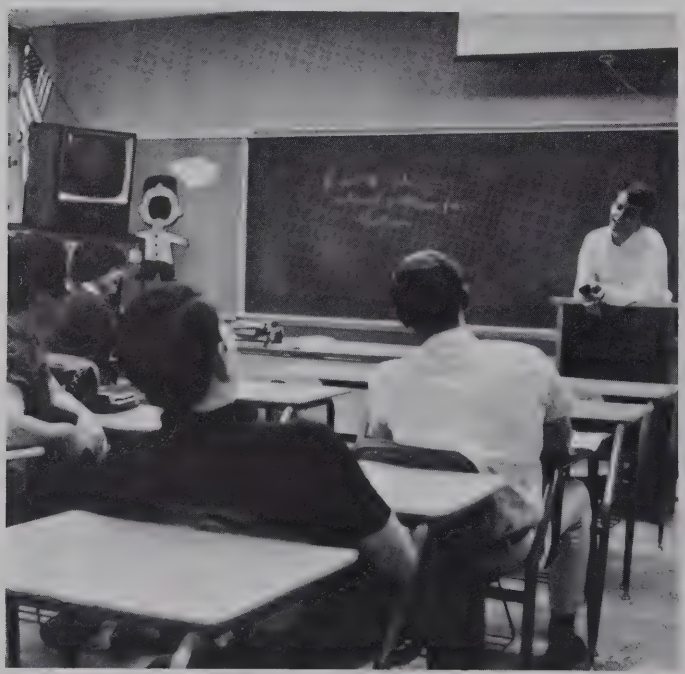
Debate and oratory club provides challenge

Members combine business with relaxation during meetings of Debate Club as they discuss the present subject.



The Debate and Oratory Club endeavored to teach skills of debating, to practice improving oratorical techniques, to develop sound reasoning and critical thinking, and to enable the school to compete in interschool debates. These objectives were fulfilled by field trips to debate conferences and by participation in Voice of Democracy, American Legion, and Rotary Club speech contests.

Language clubs encourage cultural interest

The language clubs are important because they give students better insight of the background and customs of various people. Through the participation of speaking the language, the students accomplish their goals in gaining knowledge of certain countries.

Activities sponsored by the clubs furnished not only entertainment but education. Some guest speakers were Helene Veiret (a French foreign exchange student), Kevin Beuret, and Dave Long. Other activities included parties, pen pals, and selling Baron license plates.

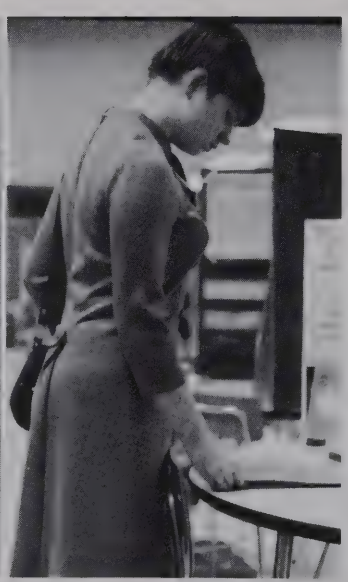
Science club previews barriers to progress



DeKalb's Science Club seeks to fulfill its goal of furthering knowledge in the causes of science. Occasional field trips helped to develop interest and extend knowledge in diversified areas of science. At joint meetings with area Science Clubs, members exchanged ideas and discussed mutual interests. Dr. Edwards of Auburn spoke concerning organ transplants at one of the meetings and later showed slides of his year on a medical team in Viet Nam.

Girls prepare for a brighter future thru FHA

A busy schedule greatly enhanced the enthusiasm this club received. A variety of projects and programs supplied not only enjoyment but knowledge. Such projects included sending candies, cookies, and goodies to area servicemen; "Daddy-Date-Night;" cookbook sales and bakesales; and a Mother's Banquet in May. Good experience aids home economics-bound girls.

Summer plans consist of attending the Freshman-Sophomore camp in Michigan and the Junior-Senior camp in Canada.

DeKalb High Future Teachers learn thru doing

Future Teachers' motto, "Learn Through Doing," is the background of DeKalb High FTA. Many FTA members are cadet teaching in elementary or junior high. Programs at meetings feature speakers, films, and discussions of subjects related to the teaching profession. As one project, FTA members are urged to plan and prepare bulletin boards to be viewed by almost every student and visitor in the school.

DeKalb's FTA tries to encourage able students to enter a teaching career by presenting pre-vocational information and experience in the teaching profession.

Pep club motivates Baron school spirit

"Baron's spirit, well let's hear it" was a typical example of the loyal backing and enthusiasm the DeKalb 140-membered Pep Club displayed during basketball season. Whether the Barons won or lost, the Pep Club was always there to spur the team onward and upward. This support proved to be an asset to many wins.

The attire of the club consisted of red jumpers (seniors wore senior cords), white blouses, and black gloves. Sectional play brought derbies.

From the first to final game the Pep Club enunciated the fine spirit which characterized all Barons.

DeKalb's Concert Choir contributed much to the school and the community during its first year. The Dedication Week program set the notes flowing endlessly throughout the Thanksgiving and Christmas seasons. The turn of the year found the Choir contest-bound, preparing for the school musicale, the sunrise service, and the spring concert. The Concert Choir displayed harmony as did the whole school in every aspect.

Director Mrs. Hansen reviews the various dynamic markings of an old favorite with senior Vickie Lockwood.

The Swing Choir delighted young and old whenever and wherever they appeared. Their colorful costumes—navy blazers and multicolored dresses—added zest to their performances. During the year they entertained various clubs and organizations in the community, sang for a hospital benefit, and presented special programs. Determination and practice was rewarded when the Swing Choir placed first in contest competition.

Concert and marching tempo are displayed by the varsity band

The Marching Barons started the 1967-68 school year with a trip to the Indiana State Fair for a High School Band Day on August 25. They were rewarded with receiving 25th place. This was not an easy feat as hard work and patience were required to even place. An average of 300 hours was put in by other bands, while the DeKalb band succeeded with only 30 hours.

Football half-time shows were a main attraction for spectators. Music and fancy footwork resulted in enjoyable programs. The band also participated in such other events as contest, concerts, and also sponsored a fish fry.

Frosh band members begin music careers

The Training Band is classified as the "apprenticeship" of the Varsity Band. This band is made up of ninth graders, or first year band students. This year it participated in concerts and contest at Columbia City. In this band, freshmen are given the chance to learn the techniques of good marching, proper concert procedures, and are given a chance to enter contest competition before reaching the Varsity level. This is the first year for this band; but it has proven to be a success, not only for each student but also from the stand-point of each person attending a concert.

Editor—Beth Brewer

Serving as a source of school information, the "Shield" was published bi-weekly and distributed on Fridays during homeroom. With the help of Miss Nancy Farr, the editors planned the page layouts and assigned stories. To help finance the paper, members of the staff sold ads to area merchants and subscriptions to DHS students. The Shield not only featured sports news, but contained Senior Spotlights, club activities, news concerning the faculty, opinion polls, and stimulating editorials. 1968 proved to be a thriving one for the Shield.

Good? We were great! To the surprise of many, but to the delight of all, the DeKalb Barons finished their first season of football with a 4—3 conference record and a 5—4—1 over-all record. Because of the consolidation, many pre-season spectators felt that the 1967 season would be a year of rebuilding, but a determined coach, an enthusiastic team, and many strong supporters proved them wrong.

The Barons traveled to Huntington for their first grid battle and came out on the short end with a 20—6 score. The Baron squad gave an excellent showing, and after losing an exciting game, Coach Platt proudly said of the opener, "I don't want to see anybody walk out of here with his head down."

For the first Baron home game, DeKalb successfully clashed with Bluffton, winning 29—14. Trailing at the half, the Barons made a smashing comeback with three TD's in the third quarter, giving DeKalb their first victory.

The Barons then met Angola in a heartbreaking conference game. The gridders' defense was good, but there was no stopping the Hornets in their 20—14 victory. The Barons, motivated by the Angola game, had little trouble chalking up a triumph over South Adams by a score of 26—7. Then in freezing weather, DeKalb and Nappanee met in a scoreless tie.

With the conference lead at stake, the mighty Barons clashed with Columbia City, came out with a victory, and moved into first place in the N.E.I.A.C. Invading the Summit City, DeKalb trailed Fort Wayne Snider by 6—0 at half, but aided by the brilliant playing of Chuck Smith, the Barons bounced back and defeated the Panthers 14—6. Then hosting Garrett, the Barons played spectacularly, romping to a lopsided 34—7 victory, with Kirk Carpenter scoring four TD's.

DeKalb next traveled to East Noble only to be defeated and knocked out of the lead in the conference. In the final game of the season, the Barons met Bellmont on their muddy field and lost 7—19. Afterwards Coach Platt remarked, "Well, boys, the season's over. I'm sure proud of the way you gave 100% this year!"

Baron underclassmen

Under the guidance of Coach Gary Hillabrand, the reserve team spent the season rebuilding for the following year. For the first game, the Barons played host to East Noble and came out on top by a score of 14—12. The reserves then met Churubusco on our home field and soundly trounced the Eagles 63—0. The Barons were defeated by close scores in the rest of the games, and finished the season with a 2—6 record.

DeKalb sets forth

The Barons successfully completed their first basketball season with an 11—9 record. Under the guidance of Coach Dick Bourquin, the DeKalb quintet produced many exciting games throughout the year, climaxed by a sectional victory. Larry Duncan contributed much to the Baron success and as a result was chosen to the second all-conference team. Honorable mention was recieved by Dean Bard and Tom Lepley. Jesse Knowles was also outstanding and proved to be a crowd-pleaser for the Barons' loyal fans, who faithfully backed the Baron team throughout the season.

Opening the season, DeKalb traveled to Columbia City for the first conference game where Jesse Knowles made the first field goal of the year. The Barons gave an impressive showing with balanced scoring and handed the Eagles an imposing 72—58 defeat. The first home game for DeKalb was a two-point thriller against Portland, the Barons needing every basket to gain a 63—61 win. The Eastside contest proved to be an easy victory with the Barons routing the Blazers 73—37. Then falling from Cloud Nine, DeKalb tasted its first defeat when Central Catholic broke the Baron's winning streak by a 67—47 margin. Seeking revenge, the Barons gained an impressive conference victory over Garrett in a close game, winning 63—57. The Barons then wrenched a 49—46 victory from East Noble in which was perhaps the worst ball-handling game of the season. Looking better in the close South Side contest, DeKalb felt defeat from the hands of the Archers by a 54—50 score. Playing on the home floor, the Angola conference game proved to be one sided as the Barons stomped the Hornets 70—35. Then in a poorly officiated game, Bellmont pushed the Barons out of the conference lead by defeating DeKalb 49—46. Hosting the Concordia Cadets, the Barons once more felt the sting of defeat, losing their first home game. Ending a three-game losing streak, the Barons bounced back and tamed Leo 66—49.

Barons thrill fans

DeKalb played a strong second half to win 51—39 over Albion, and then trounced South Adams 73—57 with Dean Bard being high scorer. The Barons' luck ran out as DeKalb was defeated by Bluffton and Snider in similar contests. DeKalb then experienced one of their poorest shooting nights of the season when Huntington handed a 54—42 defeat to the Barons. But in the final game of the season, the Barons edged Lakeland in a double overtime game to complete the first season of Varsity Basketball.

throughout season

Coach Bourquin said of his team, "They all have a good attitude and are a fine bunch of boys to be working with." A definite thorn in the side of the Barons proved to be the Fort Wayne teams, as in the six outings against the Summit City's best, DeKalb could not find the range and was defeated each time.

The Barons had a fine B-Team this year, which should strengthen the already fine crew of returning lettermen.

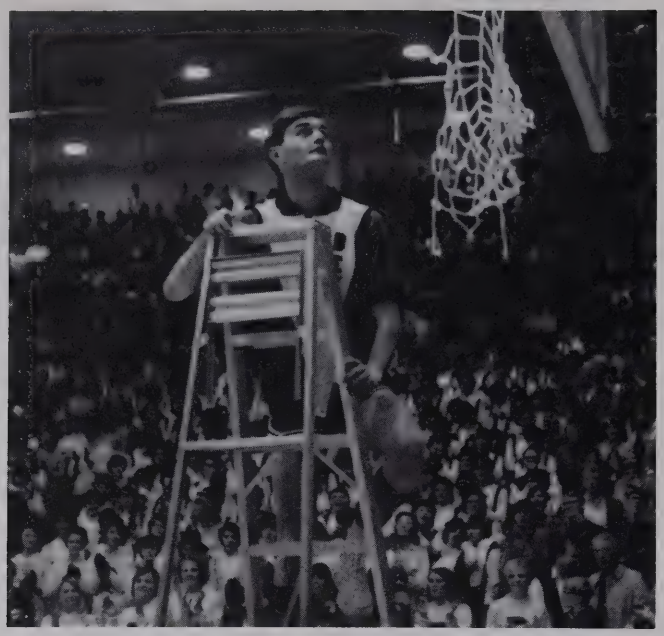
Barons capture



Senior Mike Fee, whose valuable playing was an asset to the Barons, takes his turn in cutting the nets.

The ecstatic Barons obtained the regional ticket after triumphantly capturing the sectional title. Coach Bourquin had said of the first game, "We plan to win it," and the Barons burned the nets with a devasting 85-31 victory over the Angola Hornets, which sent them into the semi-final game of the sectional. The DeKalb-Garrett game held the most interest, being a clash between the co-favorites of the contest. It was an exciting, close game, but the Barons came on stronger, winning 53—46. In the championship game Hamilton jumped off to a first quarter lead, but the Barons contained them and soared to a victorious outcome of 68—47. Following the victory the Barons cut down the nets and were presented with a sectional trophy.

Captain Larry Duncan leaps high in the air for a lay-up in the championship game with Hamilton.

first sectional

Throughout the tourney, the Baron team was ardently supported by the DeKalb students. Monday, following the sectional victory, the team was given a rousing ovation at a "pep session" during which the trophy was presented to the school. The pre-regional festivities came to a climax on the following Friday when students attended shortened morning classes in silence, followed by a sensational pep session. The Barons, as Coach Bourquin said, were "real confident" and were "not going to play dead." But the Barons just could not seem to get going in their game with the Lakers. DeKalb managed to outshoot Lakeland from the field, but it was at the free throw stripe that the Lakers gained the victory, defeating the Barons 61—53.

During the pep session, the faculty put on a hilarious skit in which Miss Farr dramatically took part.

Gymnastics enters sports picture at DeKalb

Mr. Steve Bowman, who has done a superb job coaching, studies the performance of one of his gymnasts.

Gymnastics began its first season of competition this year and appears to be on the road to victory. There are seven events which take place in gymnastics; floor exercise, trampolene, sidehorse, horizontal bar, tumbling, parallel bars, and rings, all of which demand grace, agility, and strength. Daryl Winebrenner, Jeff Carper, Lawrence Richter, and Kim Charleston led the team in scoring. Rick Dygert broke his wrist during the season and remained sidelined for the remaining meets after beginning as one of the team leaders.

The Barons managed to win only one of their meets but scored very well for a first year team. DeKalb competed three times against Angola and was commended by the Angola coach for their vast improvement. Coach Steve Bowman is looking forward to a better season next year as he has a fine crew of returning lettermen. Returning are two of the top scorers, Winebrenner and Charleston, and along with sophomore Dygert should provide a good scoring punch.

DeKalb underclassmen carry load for golf team

Coach Jack Wagner's golf team started off well and finished with a respectable 11—6 record. The Barons were victorious in their first match with East Noble and then went on to win the next six matches with Eastside, Leo, Angola, Bishop Dwenger, New Haven, and East Noble. The linksmen suffered their first defeat to the eventual sectional winners, Elmhurst. DeKalb could manage only three victories for the remainder of the season while losing six. Varsity boys usually competing in matches were Tom Dunn, John Groscop, Bill Fink, Don Grogg, and Dave Harpster.

Cindermen start slow, show improvement

The Baron track team, coached by Mr. Bob Voelkel, had a slow beginning but showed improvement as the season progressed. Hosting South Side in the first meet of the season, the Barons dropped that contest, 70—43, but then overpowered New Haven, 61—57. DeKalb bowed to East Noble and then evened their season record at 2—2 with a victory over Garrett. After placing tenth in the Goshen Relays, the Barons triumphed over Angola and then took 2nd place in the Kokomo Relays with Gene Bard setting a new pole vault record of 13' 5 1/2". The Barons went on to place fifth in the N.E.I.A.C. meet and third in the Columbia City Relays. Two cindermen qualified for the regional: Dean Bard in the pole vault and Wayne Deam in the high jump.

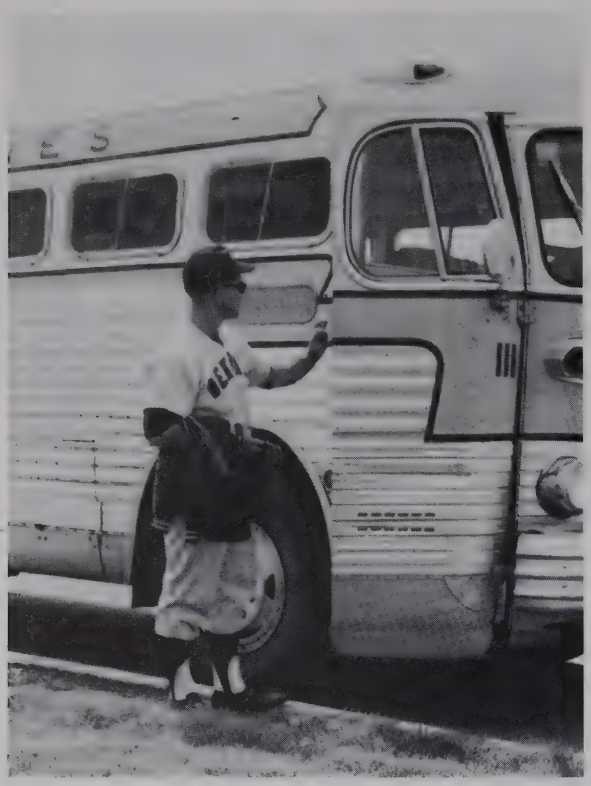
Spirited batsmen gain a conference third



Coach Roger Weimer, who led the Barons in a winning season, mounts the chartered bus for the sectional.

The DeKalb Baron baseball team of Coach Roger Weimer completed their season with an admirable third in conference standings. After dropping their two exhibition games, the Barons opened the season with victories over Bluffton, Garrett, and New Haven. The Barons also defeated Angola, East Noble, and Bellmont; and lost to Concordia, Columbia City, and South Adams to bring the season to a close. At the sectional, the Barons were defeated by Angola, 5—1.

Late start plagues energetic netters

Despite a late start, the DeKalb tennis team, coached by Mr. Ned Schlosser, managed to schedule games against five opponents. Starting the season off right, the Barons met Norwell for their first meet and triumphantly took every event. DeKalb then traveled to Bishop Luers but was defeated 5—2. The netters dropped their next two matches to South Side and South Adams. Meeting Bellmont on their home court, the Barons looked better but lost in a close 5—4 match. Usually competing were Tom Pettyjohn, Roger Andes, Dave Milks, Jim Balzer, Steve Thomas, Mike Krick, Larry Duncan, and John Fink.

Under the direction of Miss Jo Dunn, GAA enjoyed a very active year. Volleyball, a popular sport in the club, started the season in the fall. The club met surrounding area schools in games until basketball season started. Interest in basketball reigned high as nearly half the club turned out for the sport. An activity newly introduced on a large scale to GAA was gymnastics. Four girls, Colleen Brace, Kathy Foley, Cindy Kretz, and Pam Magginnis, went to the Girls' State gymnastics meet and placed high in competition. Badminton tourneys followed, succeeded by softball, which was also an intermural sport. The track team placed 4th at the district track meet and as a result, five girls were sent to the state track meet. For each sport members earn points which are accumulated over the year and are the basis for the awards presented. Three seniors earned the state plaque award: Jane Baumgardner, Kathy Foley, and Betty Proksa.

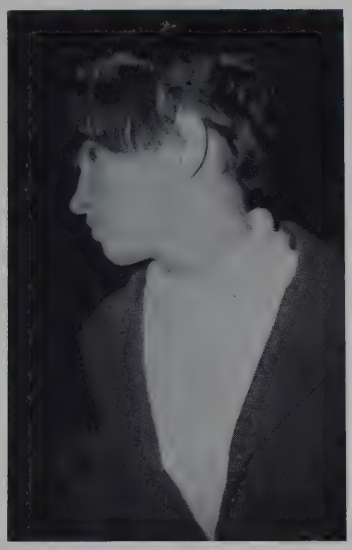
Unity among the seniors

Win or lose, proud Barons we remain

Faces, faces, faces . . . show Baron spirit



DeKalb seniors sum up many of their experiences by facial expressions. A smile may symbolize the relief of seeing Friday once again, the pleasure of finding a high mark on a government test, or the recognition of some award that was won. Very little frowning occurs in the school. Those TB tests, a defeat in basketball, or losing an overdue library book the day before grades come out bring about a few unhappy expressions now and then. DeKalb High School's atmosphere has been created by numerous eye-catching images of typical Baron students. Daily moments of realism are illustrated by these senior faces of many occasions.

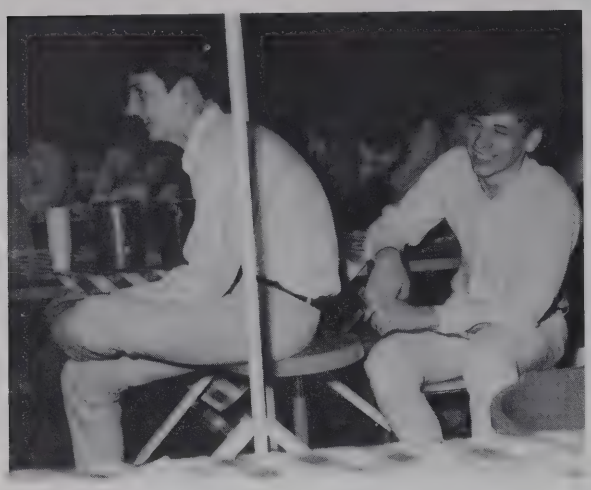
"gay nineties" prom highlights spring

Jo Ellen Phillips and Don Grogg pause to refresh between exuberant dances to keep up their energy.



Doug Wills and Don Couey take a much deserved break from their duties as concession workers.

"Now smile!" Jeff Buschman takes a snapshot of Fat Man Kim Charleston and Skinny Lady Janet Buttermore.

Jeff Carper and Alaina Sharp enjoy the soft music provided by the Jimmy Steers Orchestra.

Couples at the "Gay Nineties" prom held May 4, 1968, in the DeKalb gym relax and converse with friends.

Cindy Dyer eagerly awaits her next customer.

Another Houdini, Dick Ryan impresses the crowd with the help of Ed Walsh and an unidentified human coatrack.

Kirk Carpenter and Cheryl Korff get a kick out of Dick Ryan's "magic" and way with words.

Senior Dave Simanton takes aim and displays his admirable skill at balloon breaking.

A note from the editors . . .

Continuous effort has been devoted to composing the very first annual of DeKalb High School. A hard-working staff has made the task a satisfying one. The 1968 Saber is a final product of a combination of talents, such as composition, photography, proofreading, sales promotion, and many others. To our dedicated staff, all we can say is "Thanks for a job well done."

A special "thank you" is directed to our adviser Mr. Robert Love. The many hours he set aside for us were greatly appreciated. Many times he came to our rescue when we needed his advice.

Among the other individuals who deserve special recognition are Mr. Kelso Davis and Mr. Jim Arthur. Mr. Davis contributed many last minute services in the candid and group photography fields. Mr. Arthur, our yearbook representative, will always be remembered as his authority on many technical points has added to the appearance of our book. These two men have really been a great help.

Meg

Also, we would like to express our sincere appreciation for the time and patience given during the year by the faculty, administration, and all the other school personnel. Our special thanks goes to the student body for the pictures needed to create a book of lasting memories. And to all others who aided in preparing the first DeKalb yearbook, your assistance has been greatly appreciated.
